He liked to say that he and his partner learned a scientific and technological approach to business from Chaim Weizmann, whom they had befriended when he arrived in Manchester as a chemistry instructor in 1910.

They learned Zionism from Weizrest of their lives were counted among the most active and most generous friends of Israel. The Daniel Sieff Institute (named for a son who died young) which he established in 1934 was later to become the nucleus of the Weizmann Institute, to which he made large contributions.

Lord Sieff was an active member of the official Zionist Commission which visited this country in 1918. His wife, Rebecca, was President of World Wizo for many years until her death ten years ago.

In 1966, Israel Sieff became Lord Sieff of Brimpton and was credited with some of the best speeches on economic development to be heard in the House of Lords.

"M & S" grew into a huge business with several hundred branches in all parts of Britain and was widely credited with having contributed to the quiet social revolution in England, and the breaking down of rigid class distinctions by helping working women to dress fashionably at prices they could afford. The chain also became well known for its welfare provi-sion for employees, and the low turnover in labour, and abolition of red tape.

In recent years, when Lord Sieff took a growing interest in Israel industry, he emphasized his view that the only way to success was quality control, and that "you have to trust people and create confidence between the unions and the employers." He succeeded in doing this in his own business to a remarkable extent. This was no doubt due in large part to the unusual combination of a scholarly and analytical mind, an outgoing personality of great charm, and a genuine interest in people and their ideas. He is survived by two sons, Sir Marcus Sieff and Michael Sieff. His daughter, Judith, is the wife of Gahal M.K. Avraham Schechterman,

Soviet apply leverage on Bhutto

TWO aspects of Soviet policy, for the containment of China and Russia's centuries-old ambition of reaching by a land route the warm waters of the Indian Ocean, are operating. The first is openly manifest on Pakistan's front porch which looks to India; the second is indirect, through encouragement of Afghan embitions in Pakistan's backyard, where tremots of Baluchi and Pathan autonomy movements are being recorded.

The Soviet Union is taking the initiative to induce President Zuifikar Ali Bhutto to come to a settlement with Mrs. Indira Gandhi. Russia is making it clear that it will have to be on Mrs. Gandhi's terms: a permanent frontier on the December cease-fire line, which would mean Pakistan giving up its claim to that part of Kashmir in the Indian Union and the strategic heights in the Kargil area and elsewhere captured by India: straightening the frontier in other to make it conform to matural alignment as well as to Indian security; the resumption of trade between the two countries; and mutual reduction of the size of their armies.

In return, the Soviet Union is assuring Pakistan that it would prevent any possible dismemberment of the country. Russia is also encourag-

The fact of the matter is that Menorah did pay full compensation in this event, both to the injured driving teacher and to the survivors of the deceased, and that no legal dispute existed between Menorsh and the injured parties. be withdrawn without U.S. approval of the on-target delivery potential he saked, "if Egypt demanded their troops be withdrawn?"

The number of the alreraft does not, however, give a true picture of the on-target delivery potential of the LAF, since a Phantom can, for instance, carry up to a saked. and a Skyhawk up to four times the load of a Mirage, Both aircraft can be refuelled in midair, extending their range to cover as far south

self in dogfights against enemy

The Mirages, Phantoms and to a lesser extent the Skyhawks make up the "first line" of I.A.F. strike aircraft. The second line, according to the Institute of Strategic Studies includes 10 operational Vantour fighter bombers, 27 Mysteres, Mark 4-A; 30 Ouragans; 9 Super-Mysteres and 85 Fouga-Magisters (all are subscale). The transport fleet lists ten Stratocruisers, some of them converted into "flying tankers"; 15 Nord-Atles; ten C47s; four C46s; eight large Ch-53 type helicopters — the largest in service with the I.A.F.; 25 Bell 205 helicopters, 20 Abuettes and eight Hawk surface-to-air antiaircraft missile batteries.

The success story of the Phantom is probably without precedent in the annals of modern fighter aircraft production. First flown in 1958, the Mach 2.4 fighter-bomberinterceptor can carry loads of up to seven tons, climb to extreme atti-tudes and has an unrefuelled ferry range of some 2,300 miles.

The Soviet aircraft designers have not been able to produce an aircraft to match it in terms of all-round as the Stratts of Aden, or the performance. Over a decade has equivalent in all other directions, passed since the plane went into The Skyhawk is, however, subsonic mass production, it is still consider-

The peace-line, several miles of it in many areas of the city, is the most visible sign of ever-growing polarization between Catholics and Protestants. It is the physical di-vide; the human divisions stretch further, lie deeper in the heart and will hardly be knocked down with a bulldozer's blow.

Along the peace-line, British sol-diers mount guard from raised ma-chine-gun posts that would not seem out of place in Berlin. Slow-moving Land-Rovers and Saracen armoured cars crawl through Catholic areas,

But if Catholics and Protestants are polarized and polarizing, Catholics and the state are polarizing even more rapidly. The North's only Catholic Cabinet Minister, Dr. G. B cept in sullen confrontation. People on the next step up the ladder meet a little more, feel a little less, until said he will stay in office. But he on the top rungs there is mutual made it clear that it was not to acceptance of each other and an almost complete realization that, until serve any "Unionist regime" but to serve an Newe, brought into Brian Faulkner's Cabinet with no mandate and self-Relations Commission, said she too would stick to her post, not for Mr. Faulkner's sake but to try to keep intact the "frail bridges between Protestant and Catholic that I know atill exist."

Catholic pullout

But the last two weeks have seen the beginnings of what may well be a significant exodus from public life of the Catholic professional class, notably lawyers. Two senior Queen's Counsel on the Northern Bar, Gar-reth McGrath and Michael Lavery have asked to be relieved of their prosecuting briefs which they have been handling on behalf of the At-torney-General. Another leading Catholic barrister, James McSparran, who was Crown Prosecutor for Armagh, has also resigned because, as he put it, "of the general state of things." There are almost daily meetings of legal men in Belfast, solicitors and barristers have called a meeting to demand the repeal of the Special Powers Act (which al-lows the Government to detain peo-ple without trial) and the whole ahaly machinery of Ulster's judicial and legal system is in danger of spoing to pieces

Catholic alienation from Government can also be seen in the continuing campaign of civil disobedience. You can find Catholics in working class areas of Beifast, Derry, Strabane, Newry and other towns who cannot remember when last they paid a gas, electricity, television, or local council rates bill It is impossible to cut off essential services without also hitting neighbouring Protestant areas and hire purchase companies dare not send men to repossess their merchandise even when payments are overdue.

There is growing fear among Protestants and Unionists that the Catholic campaign is directed to-wards one thing: pushing Protest-ants against their will into an all-Ireland united republic dominated by the Roman Catholic Church.

Protestants are clinging desperately to "their" Government at Stor-mont, and to their much-shouted legalty to the British connection Both sides have their backs to the wall, but unmistakably the mood among Catholics is of impending victory and among Protestants of anxiety and impending defeat.

ITS MEANING FOR TODAY AND FOR CHRISTIANS

Marxism re-examined

A SOOK on Marxism by a Yugoslav philosopher arouses particular interests and expectations. Yugoslavia's political and economic break with Stalinism and Moscow in 1948 was inevitably followed by a reorientation and a reconsideration of Markist theory. Markist critics of Soviet Communism, like Herman Gorter and Rosa Luxemburg, long since ostracized or on the other hand canonized by Communist officialdom, were again ctudied. The windows to the Western world were opened, and Yugoslav intellectuals could take notice of what Western thinkers, xobottro-non bus esaixroM-ron diod Marxists, had to say on Marxism. As a result, a fresh wind began to blow through Yugoslav Communism, and a new, more liberal, more independent type of Communist thinking

Prof. Petrovic is considered a leading exponent of this new type of Communism. He studied philose phy not only in Zagreb, Mocow and Leninerad but elso in England and the U.S. He is not afraid of heresies, is not concerned with approval or disapproval by the Central Committee, and even dares to doubt — here and there — Mark's own authority. He opens this small volume of 18 essays with a confrontation with Stalinism. It is not surprising that the author, being a Yugoslav, sees as his first task to come to grips with Stalinism, and he presents himself as an independent, "liberal" trinker with a mind open to Western, philosophical trends.

But after this opening chapter, when he embarks upon a search for the essence of Mark's philosophy, the book becomes very disappointing, and the author's "liberalism" and independence appear to be very Karl Marz — "the conditions inimi-limited. Though his style is free of cal to religion are also inimical to the traditional Party jargon which makes most Communist literature so unreadable, it is hardly less irritating with its pretentious tone, its accumulation of rhetorical questions and its apodictic statements. As was to be expected, the central themes of modern Marx-research alienation, reification, the "young" and the "old" Marx, the difference and the contradiction between Mark and Engels — are also his central themes. But in dealing with these doubtlessly important issues, he ruminates mostly on what has been said aiready by others - and said better! - though suggesting that his findings are original discoveries of Yugoslav philosophy. And what is worse, his philosophical reasoning is frequently thoroughly unsound and he is not as free of Stalinist contamination as he would like his readers to believe.

The answer to the question what the essence of Mark's philosophy is cannot, according to Prof. Petrovic. "be obtained by a detailed comparison of quotations from Marx, but only by creative thinking in the are, and only by being "one of the will disappear," without revealing boys" can one achieve an under what this "good reason" is standing of the master. And in truly Praxis he defines as a peculiar FTER these pretentious essays it is a relief to turn to Prof. Alasdair MacIntyre's sympathetic, honest and very lucid little book. He wrote ft originally in 1953, when he was 23, and aspired to be both a Christian and a Marxist. Now, in this revised 1968 edition he is "sceptical of both, although be-lieving that one cannot discard either without discarding truths not

The point the author wishes to make is that Marxism is the distorical successor of Christian-- in so far as Christianity has lost its hold — in that it is the only secular doctrine which "retains the scope of traditional religion in offering an interprestion of human existence by neans of which men may situate themselves in the world and direct their actions to ends that transcend those offered by their immediate situation."

Prof. MacIntyre is deeply aware that religion is not a function of something else, nor a set of answers to questions better to be enswered by science, but a category sui generis, a way of life and an interpretation of human existence. For him alienstion is not only the estrangement of man from his own essence, caused by the forces of production in capitalist society and therefore to be overcome in socialism, but part of man's existence not to be understood without such religious notions as sin and redemption,

One may be doubtful of the author's optimistic conclusion, which foresees a more positive Marxist approach to religion based on the fact that in modern industrialist society "the same conditions, inimical to religion, are also immical to Marxism," and of his apparent be-lief that a development of Marxist thought will be possible outside the traditional organizational frame-works. But what prevails is a feeling of gratitude for this book, which places the confrontation of Marxism and religion on a new level, far above the old-fastrioned, meaningless discussions on materialism and idealism.

[N Mr. Maazel's previous programmes, I have admired his Derfect handling of the orchestra, but questioned the substantiality of ome of his interpretations. This particular programme did not at-sempt to present profound or es-secially absorbing music and, con-sidering the conductor's personality, t could have been a parfect ve-ticle for a display of orchestral solish and accomplished orchestral rirtuosity. However, only the first und the last item came up to ex-pectation. The others either soundd under-rehearsed, showed weakiess in certain instruments or sectons, or failed to convince.

The Rossini Overture was really mpressive, sparkling and elegant, with violins in beautiful harmony and all other instruments fulfilling dendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream" had its charm, although it bould have been presented with iceper poetic insight. The Scherzo was bad, however, too slow, too heavy, completely lacking the

core's magic enchantment.

My impression of Miss Margalit vas mixed; lyrical passages were lovely, as in all her other presenations, but technically her performance left much to be desired, and this performance, too, impressed me as under-rehearsed.

The three Tchalkovsky excerpts were good, apart from the toneless

Cor Anglais passage.

The last item, Gershwin's "An American in Paris," was one of the evening's best presentations, al-though even this piece could have been more exciting and sweeping in rhythm and sound. When, finally, Mr. Maszel led the orchestra to wards a rousing and impressive fi-nale, a last minute mishap — a completely confused pizzicato pas-sage — once again was evidence of this concert's mediocrity.

When Naveh builds apartments, they set no limits on luxury... no borders on beauty, and Naveh's latest apartments prove it:

Starting from the spacious lobby a modern elevator zips you up to your heavily carpeted landing that leads you straight to your apartment. And what an apartment!

Right from the doorstep you'll be suprised by a wider entrance, a larger kitchen, a cozy dining room, a more luxurious living room, a study for him, a dressing room for her (with its very own window), spacious separate quarters for parents and children (with one bathroom for the master bedroom, one for the children and a half bathroom for the guests.) Plus: wall to wall carpeting in the master bedroom, 3 walk-in closets, 3 balconies (one off the living area, one for the children and one off the kitchen.)

Chairman of the Jewish Agency Executive

ON behalf of the Jewish Agency for Israel, I am happy to welcome the United Jewish Appeal's Operation Israel

No. 11.

This past year has been one of historic significance in terms of solidification of the entire Jewish people around Israel. The struggle of Soviet Jewry, indeed the courage and fortitude of our brothers under oppression in both the Soviet Union and Arab states, has played an enormously important part in helping us to strengthen and define our purposes. The reconstitution of the Jewish Agency and its far-reaching ramifications strengthens the Jews of the free world in terms of responsibility and cooperation far beyond any formal agreement. We will need to draw heavily on these sources of strength during the coming year, for despite the fact that we have brought more than 150,000 new immigrants to Israel since the Six Day War, the rate is increasing and we must be ready for every opportunity whenever it arises. Despite the magnificent achievements we have registered in housing and settlement, in education, in health and welfare services, we have much to do. For the task of unceasing vigilance in a no war, no peace atmosphere and the rising costs of the defence burden, make it imperative that we rise to the ever-increasing responsibility of meeting the human needs of the people of Israel. The period has long since passed when the Israeli taxpayer could help meet these

This is a heavy yoke of responsibility, and it is up to you to understand the nature and dimension of these needs in the light of the situation that confronts Israel's people today. It is up to you to interpret these needs to the members of your home communities, and to emphasize your interpretation with your com-

That you have accepted this yoke of responsibility bears us no small measure of comfort, and underlines your unwavering devotion to the people of Israel. That you have joined us in our struggle means simply that we shall face it as a united Jewish people.

U.N. grant for Israel

TEL AVIV. — The State Attorney's office yesterday formally requested the District Court here to declare Chaude Lipsky extradictable. The application, submitted by First Assistant Attorney E. Nathan, stated that the French Government had requested Mr. Lipsky's extradition on charges of fraud involving mil-lions of francs.

Mr. Lipsky, according to the charges pressed in France, had set of $876,800 for the creation of a Centre for Information Systems in Israel. The aid project will take five in Asia and Africa is opening next the whole U.N. contribution will come to $1,095,800. But Netanya.
